

I want to be known as a well-rounded reliable student that comes to class and puts in effort. I have not skipped or missed a class all semester. Even if I really wanted to, I refrained from it. If I show up to class, then I will look like a responsible student who cares about her classes, which I do. I want to do the best I can in all my classes. I want to have the reputation of building good relationships with my professors.

Responsible Me

The real me is a person who wants to succeed. I'm very goal-oriented which requires me to have a set structure. I primarily do five things with my life at this moment: school, work, gym, friends, and time at home. I'm such a productive person that I notice when my friends around me are not nearly as driven as I am. I like to have each aspect of my life balanced. I'm constantly working to keep the balance because I hate feeling that I didn't do enough.
